

Primary Sources

vs

Secondary Sources

A piece of evidence created by someone at the time of the event.

Examples include:

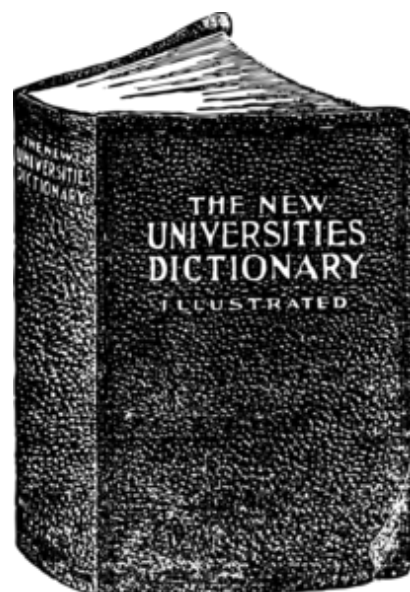

- Letters
- Diaries
- Government records
- Autobiographies
- Artifact
- Computer software

Information created by someone who was not present at an event, after an event happened.

Examples include:

- Newspaper articles
- Textbooks
- Biographies
- Encyclopedias
- Dictionaries
- Atlases

Primary Sources

A piece of evidence created by someone at the time of the event.

Examples include:

- Letters
- Diaries
- Government records
- Autobiographies
- Artifact
- Computer software

Primary Sources

A piece of evidence created by someone at the time of the event.

Examples include:

- Letters
- Diaries
- Government records
- Autobiographies
- Artifact
- Computer software

Secondary Sources

Information created by someone who was not present at an event, after an event happened.

Examples include:

- Newspaper articles
- Textbooks
- Biographies
- Encyclopedias
- Dictionaries
- Atlases

Secondary Sources

Information created by someone who was not present at an event, after an event happened.

Examples include:

- Newspaper articles
- Textbooks
- Biographies
- Encyclopedias
- Dictionaries
- Atlases

Primary Sources

Secondary
Sources

Primary Sources

Secondary
Sources

Types of Resources

Technology Resources	Print Resources	Oral Materials	Visual Materials
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• The internet• Individual websites• Computer software	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Biographies• Autobiographies• Letters• Diaries• Reference books• Government records• Historical documents• Maps• Newspapers	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A recording of a speech or interview• Radio programs• Podcasts	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Charts and graphs• Photographs• Historical maps• Paintings• Sculptures• Artifacts• Television programs• News footage

A decorative border consisting of four yellow pencils with orange erasers and sharpened tips, positioned at the top, bottom, left, and right edges of the page.

Thank you for your purchase!

